DEBTS OF AN HEIRESS.

in future be paid to him. by Mr. Daily set forth that Miss Rubsam would be eighteen years old this month. Her father left onethird of his property to his widow, and a similar share in his estate to his adopted daughter, the latter to receive such an amount as might be deemed necessary by Mrs. Rubsam, as her general guardian, for her support and education until she reached the age of twenty-one, when she was to get the income of her share and the accumulated interest for life, with the right to dispose of the principal on her death. The income of her share is estimated at $9,000 a year.

Mrs. Rubsam died on June 1, 1896, and her co Mrs. Rubsam died en June 1, 189, and her coexecutors then took up the guardianship of Miss Rubsam. Mr. Dally asserts that since that time the trustees of the estate have not allowed the same amount for her maintenance as when her mother was allow, and it is insufficient to maintain her in the social position to which she is entitled.
He adds that some of her creditors have already commenced actions against her. Miss Rubsam also submitted an affidavit in support of the application, and charged the trustees with parsimony since the death of Mrs. Rubsam. Their action has compelled her to contract debia.

and charged the trustees with parsimony since the death of Mrs. Rubsam. Their action has compelled her to contract debta.

Samuel Untermyer, counsel for the trustees, opposed the application as unwarranted, and said that Mr. Daily should never have been appointed guardian of Miss Rubsam by the Surrogate, as he was not a fit or proper person to have charge of her property. He submitted an affidavit from August Horrman, one of the trustees, saying that Miss Rubsam was the natural daughter of Joseph Rubsam, but that Mr. and Mrs. Rubsam adopted her as their daughter when she was a year and a half old and brought her up. "For some time past," the affidavit said, "she has been unruly and unwilling to observe the decorum and conventional behavior required of a young lady. During the latter years of Mrs. Rubsam's lifetime her conduct and manner of living were the occasion of great grief and mortification to her adopted mother. Since the death of Mrs. Rubsam her manner of living and general conduct have been puch as to call for protest and frequent reprimand by the trustees. The affidavit says that Miss Rubsam's conduct compelled the principal of a chool where she was to refuse to keep her there, and tells of a fitration which it is said she carried on there. It says she occupied a saide of rooms at the Savoy Hotel and kept a maid there. Mr. Daily, it is also charged, has made efforts to secure money for her on various pretexts.

Justice Russell, in denying the application, says that an allowance of $5.00 a year its presumptively sufficient for the support and education of a girl from the age of fourteen to eighteen, especially where it is to be wholly expended by herself.

FOUR HUNDRED STUDENTS GRADUATED AT THE NEW BUILDINGS.

PRESIDENT LOW, IN HIS ANNUAL ADDRESS, RE-COUNTS THE PROUD PART THE UNIVERSITY

annual commencement of Columbia University yesterday was especially significant, in that the custom which had lapsed for many years of celebrating the stored, and also because the outgoing seniors were ings on Morningside Heights. During the last halfcentury the members of the college, for want of a sufficiently large hall in their own place, have been chapels and churches, and of recent years in Carnegle Music Hall. Once, as President Seth Low resource but Niblo's Theatre, where Dr. William H. Draper, the chairman of the alumni, received his there is room, and to spare, for the largest cele bration, and henceforth Columbia's great yearly festival will take place within her own walls. In years gone by it was the practice to hold the formal part of the commencement services in the morning and devote the rest of the day to jolification. Yesterday this happy custom was resumed. The conferring of degrees and the awarding of honors took place in the morning, and were followed by class reunions and a luncheon, the presentation of two gates to the University, and finally by a large anniversary meeting of the alumni. Throughout the whole day the buildings were thronged with admiring visitors.

THE PROCESSION TO THE GYMNASIUM. The ceremonies of the day began with a procession from the campus to the gymnasium. Thomas Randall, the proud marshal, had in his charge the procession, which comprised the candidates for degrees to the number of nearly four hundred; the faculities of Columbia, Barnard and Teachers colleges, alumni associations, the candidates for honorary degrees, each escorted by one of the faculty; the University Council, the dean and trustees of Barnard College, the visiting clergy and guests, while the last division included President Seth Low and the trustees of the University. The gymnasium had been converted into an admirable auditorium, with a large platform erected at one end and seatings placed for fully two thousand people. As the leaders in the procession entered the gymnasium the strains of Weber's "Jubilee" overture were completely drowned by the college cheers of the students, which were repeated time and again as members of the faculty, the president and other prominent individuals passed own the central aisle on their way to the plat-rm. Voctferous as these cries had been, they were, however, as whispers compared to the pan-demontum which broke loose when General Stewart Woodford, a member of the class of '54, who was seated among the audience, responded to an invitation to go to the platform.

The exercises were opened with prayer by the Rev. Dr. Cornelius R. Duffle, and then President Low delivered his annual commencement address. which in part was as follows:

which in part was as follows:

During all the years Columbia has conferred upon her sons the right of eminent domain in many a field of scholarship, but she herself for forty years has been, in a sense, a dweller in tents. If this reminds us again, as it should that the university is not so much the hulidings that we occupy as the life that fills the buildings, the spirit that breathes in the atmosphere, the memories and the traditions that cluster about our famous, our revered and our beloved names, it very properly adds, nevertheless, to our rejoicing that now at last Columbia once more has a home of her own, and a home, I gladly think, not wholly unworthy of the high things she stands for in tals majestic and cosmopolitan city.

AT HER CWN FIRESIDE.

AT HER OWN FIRESIDE.

Justice Russell, in the Supreme Court, yesterday defield an application made by Henry Daily, ir., the guardian of Miss Josephine Louise Rubsam, for an increase of the allowance furnished for her maintenance and education by the trustees of her father's will, from $400 a month to $5,000 a year, and also refused to sanction the payment from a fund in the hands of the trustees of about $2,000 a year, and also refused to sanction the payment from a fund in the hands of the trustees of about $2,000 a year, and also refused to sanction the payment from a fund in the hands of the trustees of about $2,000 a year, and also refused to sanction the payment from a fund in the hands of the trustees of about $2,000 a year, and also refused to sanction the payment from a fund for the camp of an experience of the contracted by Miss Book and the payment from a fund realize with charge of the fundamental payment from a fund for the camp of an experience of the fundamental payment from a fundamen the guardian of Miss Josephine Louise Rubsam, for an increase of the allowance furnished for her maintenance and education by the trustees of her father's will, from $400 a month to $5,000 a year, and also refused to sanction the payment from a fund in the hands of the trustees of about $3,500 of debts contracted by Miss Rubsam, who is an adopted daughter of the late Joseph Rubsam, of the brewling firm of Rubsam & Horrman.

The application before the Court was made to compel the surviving trustees under Mr. Rubsam's will, August Horrman and William K. Leicht, to increase Miss Rubsam's allowance and to pay her febts. Her guardian also asked that her allowance of the guardian also asked that her allowance of the surviving trustees under Mr. Rubsam's edits. Her guardian also asked that her allowance of the own domain, but also because it is being then the first commencement also because it is being then the first commendation, but also because it is being then the first commencement also because it is being then the first commencement also because it is being then the first commencement also because it is being then the first commencement also because it is being then the first commencement also because it is being then the first commencement also because it is being then the first commencement also because it is being the first commencement also because it is being then the first commencement also because it is being then the first commencement also because it is being the first of the first own domain, but also because it is being the first of the first own domain, but also because it is being the first own domain, but also because it is being the first of the country is at time when the country is at time whe of the war by one army of the work of the colbarracks and as a hospital. The work of the college, in the mean while, was suspended, and was only resumed at the end of the war, presumably in 1781, as the first degrees after the Revolution were conferred in 1785. This war, as it broke up our work, affected us also importantly in another respect, for it changed our name. The college that went into the Revolutionary War as King's College came out of it as Columbia College. I have lege came out of it as Columbia College. I have lege came out of it as Columbia college. I have lege with that this was the first instance of the use of the name Columbia in any connection. The War of 1812, on the other hand; the Maxican War and the Civil War, passed over the head of the college without interrupting in any way its regular and peaceful work, and now once more we see the same phenomenon. Yet, to all the wars, as to this war with Spain, men of Columbia have to this war with Spain, men of Columbia have gone. The graduates have laid aside their life tasks, and with the trained intelligence the college gave them have hazarded their lives unto the death at the call of country; the young men, the undergraduates, have left the peaceful shades of Alma Mater to plungs, without counting the cost, into the thick of battle. What does it signify, this repeated self-sacrifice of individuals in the presence of war, this uninterrupted attention on the part of the college and the University to the duies of the college and the University to the duies of the college and the University to the duies of peace? Happy shall we all be if we learn its deep significance.

NOT FOR ITSELF ALONE.

It means, indeed, that the University does a work of such continuing importance that the work may not be interrupted even by war, except when war makes it impossible; but it also means that our University, with its splendid buildings, its our University, with its splendid buildings, its great equipment and its large endowments, does not exist for itself; that the education to be had here is not given for selfish uses, but is to be received as a sacred trust for country and for mankind, and it means that when any of us are tempted to forget that life is service, and life is sacrifice, we have only to turn. In order to recover the true ideal, to our own brothers of Columbia, who, in war after war, have placed their lives at the service of the country. It is not every one's duty to go to this war nor to any war, but I thank God that to-day, as always, some of our men have gone, and are thus teaching the lesson which alone gives value to any education that the University can give—that it is only by self-surrender, in one form or another, that a man may truly live.

MISS HELEN GOULD MAY SAIL.

Miss Helen Gould has expressed a wish to cross the Atlantic and visit her sister, the Countess Castellane. So far as is known, however, she has not definitely decided to go. Miss Gould's wish is more a matter of moment with her family than if any other member of the family had expressed the same desire. She has always been contented with her home life and her charities, and has never been a traveller. She occasioned some surprise when she came down from Irvington and opened her town house, and entertained in a quiet way. She has talked of the matter on several occasions, and will probably go, but she has not definitely said so as yet.

SENATOR TELLS COUNSEL. FOR "THE PRESS."

The trial of the action brought by State Senator John Raines, of Canandaigua, against the New-York Press Company to recover $55,000 damages for an alleged libel published in "The Press" on April 18, 1895, was continued in the Supreme Court yesterday before Justice Maclean and a jury. Senator Raines says that the article charged him with demanding bribes for his action in insuring the passage of the Firemen's Salaries bill, asserting among shoot when Mr. Van Wickle, who had preceded other things that "among the Senators who required to be taken care of were Senators Raines, Coggeshall and Robertson." The defence is nial of the allegations in the complaint, and the assertion of the truth of the article in question.

The direct examination of Senator Raines was closed yesterday morning. The Senator denied the Press," and told of his action with regard to the Firemens' bill. He said he drew an amendment to the bill as introduced in the Assembly, making the provision for the increase of the officers' salaries mandatory at he request of Louis F. Payn.

Delancey Nicoll, counsel for "The Press," cross-examined the Senator. Mr. Raines said he first met Payn in 1881. He denied that he ever had any business transactions with Payn, but said he had conversations with him several times. He met Payn in the Senate library when asked by him to draw the amendment to the Firemen's bill. "What was air. Payn doing?" asked Mr. Nicoll.

"Did you ever suspect what his business was?"

"It never occurred to you that he was trying to influence legislation for money?"

"I never had any such idea." Mr. Nicoli pressed the witness as to whether he knew what a lobbyist was.

Senator Raines said he had heard of lobbyists senator Raines said he had heard of lobbyists as persons employed as attorneys in the interest of certain corporations, and he had heard the term applied to persons who used improper means to influence legislation. Total June 8, 1898..... UNION CLUB ELECTION.

The annual election of the Union Club was held last night. As foretold in The Tribune, Edward Cooper was elected president, J. Hampden Robb was elected vice-president, Franklin Bartlett secre-tary and Henry De Forest Weekes treasurer. The old House Committee was re-elected. The question of moving uptown was not considered. No other business was brought up.

REPUBLICAN VICTORY II.

From The Philadelphia Inquirer, It was a great fight in Oregon.

CLOSELY CROSS-EXAMINED AS TO HIS A. S. VAN WICKLE, THE WEALTHY COAL OPERATOR, KILLED WITH HIS OWN GUN.

Hazleton, Penn., June 8 (Special) .- By the accidental discharge of his gun this afternoon A. S. Van Wickle was fatally shot. He was a wealthy philanthropist, and to this entire region the announcement of his death was a shock.

Mr. Van Wickle was the most extensive coal operator in the Lehigh region and well known in New-York business circles, where the office of his firm is at No. 1 Broadway. The Van Wickle family were just preparing to go to their summer home, in Bristol, R. I. Mr. Wickle went out this afternon to participate in a clay pigeon shooting contest with a party. L. S. Allison, his brother-in-law, was about to him, bent forward to mark his score.

The stock of his gun rested on the ground and the muzzle against his abdomen. The movement of his body seems to have jarred the weapon, and it exploded. The full charge tore through his abdomen, inflicting a wound which resulted in his death shortly after he had been taken to his home.

A. S. Van Wickle was born in New-Brunswick, N. J., in 1856, and he was a son of Simon Van Wickle, who was a Pennsylvanian and an extensive coal operator in this region. His mother was a descendant of the Randolph family of Virginia. Mr. Van Wickle was educated in Providence, R. I., and he was a graduate of Brown University in the class of '76.

After completing his education he came to Hazleton and engaged in the coal business with his father, who at that time was president of the Ebervale and South Mountain Coal Company. In 1878 he was elected president of this company, succeeding his father, and continued as such until 1881, when he went to Cleveland to look after the interests of his company.

In 1886 he returned to Hazleton, retaining interest in different Cleveland enterprises. He was at once made president of the new firm of Van Wickle & Co., successors to the old company.

Sir: Referring to your article of Sunday last, entitled "Mr. Davitt and the Anglo-Saxons," in which you make short work of that gentleman's "suppositifious statistics," I venture to express the hope conducts for likel against the necessary who made that you will favor the many who are interested in this question by informing them where you obtained the "real" statistics upon which you base your assertion that prior to 1890 England sent us considerably more than two-thirds as many imconsiderably more than two-thirds as many immigrants as Ireland did, having sent 10,000,000 or

A GREAT DAY'S WORK IN OREGON.

Taking it altogether, this is the best Republican day's work which has been done in this glorious Union since 1896. The Demo-Populiat-Sliver combine in Oregon is utterly routed. And, best of all, the campaign has turned on the sharpest kind of an honest-money issue, where the Oregon Republicans have taken as stalwart a stand as the Republicans of Massachusetts.

NOT LIVING UP TO THEIR TRADITIONS. From The Baltimore Sun.

From The Baltimore Sun.

It is odd that the sanitary appliances, hospital ships, etc., are so lacking among the Spanish forces as compared to their opponents, when it is remembered that the military hospital itself was a Spanish device, being first introduced by Isabella of Castile in her armies while warring with the Moors. As the first sovereign to employ surgeons to accompany the soldiers and to erect tents for the wounded after battle, she gave the Spanish another little to fame which they have, apparently, not taken the trouble to sustain.

MORE SUBTLE SPANISH STRATEGY. From The Louisville Courier-Journal.

It is true we have located the squadron of Admiral Cervera, but can we feel safe in starting our expedition to Cuba as long as the terrible Temerario is loose and roaming around? We have reasons to believe that even now the Temerario is making straight for the headwaters of Bitter Creek and that the report that she is to be laid up in Paraguay for the rest of the war is only another piece of deep, devilish, Spanish "strategy."

PREMIER HONORS OF THE WAR. From The St. Louis Republic.

From The St. Louis Republic.

Vermont and Alabama have thus far won the premier honors of the war. The hero of Manila is a Vermonter. The hero of Santiago is an Alabamian. The name of each will live in history as long as mankind admires courage and manhood. Their deeds not only reflect honor upon American character, but also emphasize the fact that American character is made of the zame material, whether the environment be the granite hills of New-England or the billowy cotton-fields of the South.

PREMATURE TALK OF PEACE.

The only sure way of bringing the war to an early and successful clone is to prosecute vigorously the invasion of Cuba and Porto Rico and the capture of Manila; and, should that not suffice, te undertake a naval demonstration along the coast of Spuin itself. With none of these things accomplished, it is entirely premature to talk of peace. THE SOUTH ATTESTS HER LOYALTY.

From The Cincinnati Commercial-Tribune.

A warship wearing the name of a Southern city made the first capture of the war; a Southern ensign was the first officer killed, and a Southern officer has just performed the heroto feat of homening the Spanish fleet in Santiago Harbor. The South attests her loyalty in deeds that history may proudly enter upon the credit side of time's ledger of accounts. SUPPORT THE PRESIDENT.

From The Chicago Inter Ocean.

No man since Monroe has promised so much for the future wealth, safety and glory of this great Republic. With the assistance of the people, no man will have accomplished more for America and Americans in this century than William McKlinley. Hold up his hands; respond to his call; support him, and carn for him and the Nation of to-day the unstituted praise and gratitude of the America of the twentieth century. REPUBLICAN VICTORY IN OREGON.

Bryan Democrats, Populists and free silverites of all parties. All these forces have been overthrown, and a Republican will be elected to the United States Senate, where every Republican rote that can be had is needed. Every effort to force a breach in the Republican ranks was futile. Oregon has an eye upon the Navy and Army of the United States. She has heard from Dewey and Hobson and the other heroes, and she has refused to be led into free-silver and froe-trade paths, and has stood by the President most nobly.
